the bus window framed a dozen shots as it returned with you and you knew even then there would be more shots some right then, others later some you would frame some you would only hear of but all of this town with these people the ground is firm now under your feet beneath you and above you there's green and yellow but broken regularly by unnatural colors in an academic effort to disguise the old swamp maybe you're alone in the dark in the chill under the arch it's a different kind of world now the silhouettes of the buildings against where the sun was globes of light sit above circles of white concrete others rush by in pairs or by themselves gleaming rectangles and sounds behind that Sunday it was white and there was much to plow through before breakfast the branches looked through it in their strange wrappings and you in your parka plodded back over more footprints than before as the campus woke up the Arranger

flushes out colors of the most delicious sort pauses
with the delight of any creator and then remembering sets about capturing other things to be ordered the studies hold up for a long time (learning and labor 17) later you look for relief with the same quiet (organizations and activities 37) or with an occasional clatter (mock convention 65) maybe you explode (sports 69) sometimes you get out of yourself (performing arts 89) but you always return to that pervading element (people 107) and ance a year find it neatly classified (directory 197) the light powder left us a new medium; we worked with it diligently later, it changed a wet, white, heovy wonder made for snowballs soon, ice hard, blue that gave us something to slip over the Eskimos have seven words for snow we use adjectives cooks offered openings presently how would you like a peanut-butter & jelly sandwich right now?

crackpots outside Oberlin preferred after a while it gets earlier thoughts of morning classes are going orange dots break the dark we can only feel the cloud they fill between us too tired to leave we keep talking too exhausted to say nothing we keep talking we've been waiting for this chance and the night will go while we take it you find yourself with yourself in the sunlight at first your eyes pick up (the breeze moves the ivy across Peters) then your ears (one child calls another across the Square) but soon your open eyes see nothing and your ears hear silence (sights and sounds are stopped as easily as senses)

the breeze and the children are gone and you're left with nothing but you and us
